Democratic Nomination

Will Have No Party Opposition

Congressman Ralph Gilbert, of Shelbyville, at present the able representative of the Eith Congressional District, announces his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Congress and we feel safe in saying that he wil lhave no opposition from the democratic party for this nomination. Congressman Gilbert has made a dorsed by the party and his re-nomination assured. Mr. Gilbert is now in Kentucky looking after the registration of the democratic voters, which is to take place July 10th and 11th, and in a letter to the Central Record sets out many reasons why this registration law is a good one and believes its operation will go a long way toward the purity of the ballot which should be kept inviolate.

His letter is of interest to every voter in Garrard county and we reproduce it in full:

American Legion News

Doughboys, gobs and marines, who attend the American Legion national convention in New Orleans October 16 to 21, may obtain a "bunk" for $1.50 a day, as a result of an agreemeht between representatives of 7 leading hotels and convention of-

The hotel men have consented to establish a rate of $1.50 for rooms without baths and $2.50 with baths. This rate is based on a minimum of three persons to the room. If the service man prefers to dwell in solitary grandeur he will pay $4.50 or $7.50, dependent upon whether his room is equipped with a bath.

All reservations for hotel rooms during the five days of the convention will be made through the fortyeight Legion state adjutants, who will forward the reservations to the hotels and housing committee of the convention.

Some of the most famous hostelries in the South are a party to the agreements for reduction in rates. Included in the list are the Grunewald, St. Charles, De Soto, Lafayette, Montelone, Bienville and Planters. Legion officials obtained assurances from all hotel managers that all rooms, excluding thoe occupied by permanent guests, will be turned over to the convention visitors.

PROBABLY LAST WILD PIGEONS

Killed in Montgomery County; Colonel Jim Maret Gives History of Birds

(Lexington Herald)

Probably the last free carrier or wild pigeons in Kentucky, or the world, were killed along the waters of Slate creek, Montgomery county, Kentucky. It was in 1892 when J. H. Kemper was dove hunting that in firing on some doves at the edge of a corn field he killed four or five birds. Two of them were much larger than doves

On his way home he overtook James Howard, a citizen of Montgomery county, who was 70 years old. On observing the birds which Mr. Kemper had tied to the rear of his saddle, he inquired: "Where did you get those wild pigeons? I have not seen one for the last 20 years." This inquiry was the first intimation to Mr. Kemper that he had slain two of the "grandfathers" to the dove family.

In the year following, Mr. Kemper was dove hunting in the same neighborhood, and sitting side by side on the limb of a tree he observed two birds which resembled doves. He fired upon them and brought them down. On picking them up he discovered they were wild pigeons.

Shortly afterward Mr. Kemper read a worldwide advertisement, published by one of the leading scientific societies (probably the Smithsonian Institution) offering $1,000 for the capture of a pair of wild pigeons. A search over the world failed to find a single pigeon except a pair in captivity which were kept in the Cincinnati Zoo. One of these birds died soon after that date and the other lived up to about 15 years ago and was the last wild pigeon in the world.

Back in the early settlement of Kentucky wild pigeons were so numerous, it is said, they were numbered not in millions, but billions. A Maysville editor relates an instance of Boone having made his escape from the Indians during the flight of untold numbers of these birds. It was at a point near the Ohio river. not far below Cincinnati, that the old hunter came upon an Indian camp L. VERY CHEAP

A Man Is Worth Only Ninety-Eight Cents, Says

Dr. Luden

Ninety-eight cents is figured by Dr. Georgine Luden as the actual value of the "average man," reduced to the elements, as follows:

Fat enough for seven bars of soap. Iron enough for a medium-sized

Sugar enough to fill a shaker. Lime enough to whitewash a chick-

Sulpher enough to rid a dog of fleas.

This is no idle or fantastic computation, but a result set forth to show that a scientist thinks it worth while to impress the public with some striking truths in a way made familiar in unscientific demonstrations and incidentally to bring human vanities within proper perspective.

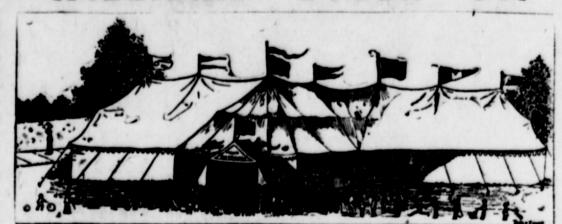

Dr. Luden analyzes the minute units composing some of the ingredients of the human body as revealed by the miscrocope and by microchemistry in the medical laboratories.

It's difficult to blush upon occasion when the druggist furnishes the complexion.

Up To France

Chaos must reign in Europe for another period of time.

Every nation concerned agreed to and advocated a revision of the reparations figures except France. She refused ,and by her refusal the loan was blocked.

In demanding her pound of flesh to the last ounce, when a reasonable concession would have meant the rehabilitation of stricken Europe, herself included, France has made the mistake of her life, one which will cost her dearly in the end.

Had she agreed to a revision of the reparations the European situation would have been rapidly cleared up through the action of the bankers in financing a readjustment and the consequent return to industrial and commercial prosperity.

This improvement would have extended to America and every other distant country. The whole world would have shared in the beneficial results.

In every city in the country there are large numbers of people who would welcome a return to the farm if such could be affected. Generally they are men of families who have been brought up on the farm but left in their younger days to "make their fortunes in the city," and are now marooned there as effectually as if stranded on a desert island.

It cost money to change from a crowded city to virgin land and convert the soil into a productive farm. And money they have not-at least not sufficient for the transformation.

There should be a general reduction of all prices of every nature, beginning with the man at the top, who can best afford it, and ending with the one at the bottom, who can least afford it.

It is useless to ask one element of our population to suffer a reduction in revenue while other elements continue to rake in their exorbitant profits. That is both unfair and foolhardy, because it leads to unrest and trouble.

There can never be any great reduction in table costs as long as a great portion of the land remains untilled and those who are at present working the farms are compelled to pay excessive prices for everything they use.

A careful and honestly administered system of governmental aid to those who desire to return to the farms and become definite producers would go a long way toward solving the most difficult problem now facing the American people.

The salary schedule must be made by the County Board of Education and submitted in duplicate to the State Board of Education for approval by the State Board before eachers' contracts are made; and an before any payments are made to eachers.

No teacher can be legally employed who does not hold at the time of his employment a proper legal certificate which will not expire during the term for which he is employed.

The first 25c of the county school evy must be devoted exclusively to Hogs Don't Sweat supplementing teachers' salaries, or s much of it as is needed to meet he salary schedule and the minimum salary law. In those counties where the 25c levy when added to the state per capita is not sufficient to meet he minimum salary law, the county poard may pay a lower salary than the legal minimum.

Must Have Shade

Hogs are non-sweating animals and unless they are provided with protection in the form of shade or water for wallowing purposes, they suffer heavily from heat during the hot summer months, live stock men say. Heavy losses resulting each summer from injury, death and shrinkage in shipments of livestock are | 0000000000 caused largely by improper methods of handling the animals at shipping points, marketing specialists at the College of Agriculture say. Anything which adds to the comfort of animals in transit diminishes the danger of losses, their suggetions on shipping point out.

"Before having animals placed in them, cars should be cleaned carefully and bedded with sand or some other similar bedding, the use of these being preferable to straw, sawdust and shavings," D. G. A DIET OF LONGEVITY

Recipe of Woman Whose Forefathers Lived to be 150

It may interest your readers to hear of a system of diet which is that of the early world when people lived hundreds of years without growing old. I heard of it while traveling in Asia Minor from an Armenian woman of 60 of very youthful appearance. Traditions on diet and, long life had been preserved in her When Pests Are Found in Locality, Acfamily from very ancient times.

Her father had lived to 150 and her grandfather and her grandmother, also. She attributed her youth to certain laws of diet and a particular sweetmeat, a kind of sweep paste, which she claimed was one of the foods of the patriarchs and enabled them to live to their great age. It prolongs youth and retards old age, and is made from two of the lifepreserving foods mixed with honey and other ingredients. She believed L. A. Giddings and now ready for disthat old age and disease were due to tribution by the United States Departwrong combinations of food, and that a longer youth can be achieved by keeping as strictly as possible to the diet of the ancient world.

She divided food into three classes-the life-giving, containing the Lucy and Nolie Turner and Laverne proteids, fats and carbohydrates, the life-preserving, only six in number: wine, olive oil, youhort (fermented milk), butter, honey and dates, and the life-destroying, five in number, which should never be consumed, and consist of flesh of meat, tea, coffee, beer and spirits. Her own diet consisted of whole meal bread, eggs, vegetables, some of each of these life-preserving foods, and lentils, and at the mid-day and evening meals some of the sweetmeat, the latter be-Francis and Collis O'Neal were visi- She claims that it is possible to mainlong time on this diet.

Dirt from the beet dumps apparently is the most common means of spreading the sugar-beet nematode and should be the first to receive attention in planning control measures, according to Farmers' Bulletin 1248. The Sugar Beet Nematode in the Western States, prepared by Gerald Thorne and nent of Agriculture.

Prevent Scattering Soil. Since the removal of dirt from the lumps seems to be the only practical uethod of disposing of the thousands tons of soil annually screened from the beets, says the bulletin, precautions must be taken to prevent scatering the soil containing nematodes. the farm bureaus:
The sugar company operating in the district is requested to refuse contracts for beets grown on soil that is known to be infested with the sugar-

BUILT BETTER than Cars that Cost More-

CAREFUL analysis of the construction A and complete equipment of the Light-Six will convince you that it has no duplicate in value in the light car class.

For instance, the machining of the crankshaft and connecting rods on all surfaces is a manufacturing practice that is found only on costlier cars.

This particular operation is mainly responsible for the fine balance of the Light-Six motor and its remarkable freedom from vibration at all speeds. It also has an important bearing on the wearing quality of the car and on its long-lived dependable service.

The exceptional values in the Light-Six are possible because practically every part that goes into the car ismanufactured complete in the most modern plant in the world. Parts-makers' profits are practically eliminated. Important savings through better methods and bigger volume permit greater value to the buyer.

From the standpoint of shrewd investment you should find out why the Light-Six offers you so much more for your money in performance, service and economy.

As a rule, During the winter months we girls welcome a stranger, and try to make her enjoy herself. But if Cella Warren needed any one's assistance in enjoying herself. I hadn't noticed it. The trouble was, she let nothing stand in the way of her enjoyment; other people's hurt feelings or things like that did not give her the slightest concern. In fact, we learned later that hurt feelings were part of Miss Celia's enjoyment, yes, really. Else why did she walk Dora Barr's beloved Billy up and down before the Barr home, after she had un-

Then all at once Celia Warren blew like a mischievous cyclone and mixed things all up.

"Sallie dear," Celia Warren sald to me with her annoying, amused smile, "Why in the world do you let Ted Loring be so dead sure of your affection for him. If a man were as sure and conceited about his power over me, I'd show him, I would. Why, when he was talking to me at the party last night I said, jokingly, 'You'd better go and find Sallie or some other handsome man will take her to supper,' and Ted laughed, a queer sort of laugh it was and said, 'Oh. I will fird Sallie alright, just where I left her.' That new Le Strange man has a bit of crush on you, too, Sallie," Celia added, "though it would be hard to make your Ted believe that."

So I did just what Nell and Dora had done under the same provocation -I determined to show Ted Loring that he need not be so conceitedly sure of me, after all. I talked to that Le Strange man so long at our next gathering that he insisted upon taking me into supper, while Ted walked off laughing, with Cella Warren. So she added another conquest—and

"If Jackie only would not take in everything that girl says," lamented Nell. "He wouldn't attach himself to her train if it wasn't in pique against Gentle Dora's tone was actually spiteful, "When Celia Warren talks about the wonderful places she has been and the noted people who entertained her and the great musicians whom she accompanies, well, I just wish I could face her with her lie." Nell sat up.

"That's it," she exclaimed wrathfully, "if we could show those inbecile unhappy boys that she is untruthful in one thing, they might guess that she's been untruthful too, concerning

The music ceased abruptly and Celia Warren swung around on the plane

"Fine," she praised my obtuse Ted

"you sing as well as Georger." Georger was being lionized in our town fust then "Did you every hear the Dean of Hampdon sing, Miss Warren?" I suddenly asked. Probably not. Hampdon was ou college. Dora, Nell and I went through together. "The Dean is really celebrated as a singer. You took up music, I believe, you said, at our Hampdon one year? Of course then, you know Dean Gordon.

"Oh, yes," Celia Warren answered carelessly.

She looked up at the three boys im pressively.

"I have often played for him," she told them. "And he was mighty goodlooking. Such wonderful dark eyes. He used to take me around a lot, though it wasn't in accordance with college rules. You see, I had the happy excuse of playing his accompaniments. It was then that I stood up dramatteally.

"Which," I remarked clearly, "is all very strange, Miss Warren, inasmuch as the Dean of Hampdon college is a woman, a small blonde woman, Elizabeth Gordon."

It was mean and stooping to Cella Warren's level, too, but there are times when a lesson is necessary. And I must admit that there was no regret in our crowd when Miss Cella moved on to an adjacent town and we resumed our old happy ways.

REMINISCENCES

By GLADIS F. PRAY

It is a common thing for middle aged people to forget their youth and to condemn all the thoughts and acts of youth as folly. Sometimes, as these people pass middle age and reach the point where they see that even the history of families truly repeats itself, their judgment mellows and their sympathy with youth returns. This would have been brought home very forcibly to any person listening to the discussion that took place in the Armstrong farmhouse kitchen on a sunny morning last fall. I had it on the best authority, that of Granddad Armstrong himself.

Of course, there was a long introduction to his story. Then he rambled on to how he had the time and opportunity to observe how things were going between Anne and his grandson and namesake, William Armstrong.

Finally he reached the point where so story begins, the morning after the dance over at Rosedale, when William came down, sleepy-eyed and yawning to find his father engaged with his favorite topic, the worthlessness of the present generation, especially on the farm, and his determination that his sou must give up "lally-gaggin" round with that 'ere Anne Marshbanks and get down to brass tacks." As is usual with mothers, Mary Armstrong was trying to smooth things over, but was not succeeding very well.

As William reached the kitchen door his father was just delivering his ulti-

"I tell you, Mary, there's no use arguin'; I told the boy only last week he'd have to give it up, else he could get out and shift for himself and just find out how easy he'd find it to support himself, let alone two."

Here William spoke for himself.

"And I told you, pa, what I tell you now. I'd get out and glad to, except for mother. You've no call to make such a fuss over me takin' Anne to a dance now and again. I work hard for you all day, harder than any hired hand you ever had, and—"

"Hush, Willie!" from the mother.
"Your father has worked hard for years that you might have this place clear of debt when you grow up."

"Yes, and small thanks I get for it. too."
"Now, don't you get to thinkin' I'm sidin' with you, pa, for I'm not," interposed Mrs. Armstrong.

"Anyway, as pa says, there's no use arguing about it, and as long as he feels the way he does the sooner I clear out and get a start for myself the better," said Willie. "I'll take just what I need in the suitcase and catch the 6:29 from the Center. I'm glad I saved the money grand-dad gave me for my birthday. That will start me.

anyway."

"Yes, and once that's gone, you'll find that trees in city parks don't bear greenbacks, me lad—"

A low chuckle broke in from the corner, where granddad, who had puffed placidly on his ancient pipe during the debate, now raised his venerable head and regarded his son with a quizzical air.

"No, indeedy, money don't grow on the bushes in city parks, William, and no one knows that better than your father. Now, I wonder, did he ever tell you how he learned that? Maybe it 'ud be a bit hard for him to tell you, but there's your mother knows all about it, and could say a deal if she dast. No? I can see by their faces they never did tell. Welt, old people are forgetful, so p'r'aps I'd best re-

"N-o-w, John, don't int'rupt your father, nor you, Mary. You know, William, once on a time I thought your pa had summat better to do than to be squirin' a certain good-lookin' girl to dances, but he didn't think so. Lawsy, no! We had some words about it, and he packed his duds and started off for Boston on some money his grandma give him. He was goin' to show his dad what he could do. Yes, he showed me all righty," with an appreciative grin. "He resky'd a fair lady in trouble on the Boston train, and she resky'd his wallet, so the money trees on Boston Common didn't bloom for him that year."

As granddad subsided John rather sheepishly glanced at his wife, who suddenly needed something in the pantry. Then he cleared his throat, made a couple of false starts, and finally terked out:

"Well, granddad, you would have your say, but I hope you'll forget that old yarn, if we agree to say no more about the party. If Billy promises not to be out ruinin' his health more than two nights a week, I guess the old farm won't go to rack an' ruin yet awhile—that is, if he makes the best of his chance, as I did, and persuades the girl to come and live where he won't have to be chasin out nights. What do you say to that, Mary?"

Mary only smiled, but her husband dld not notice the lack of an articulate response.

Considerate.

"Would you mind driving a little slower, old man?"

"Not getting scared, are you?"
"Oh, no, nothing like that, but I'd hate to take an unfair advantage of my life insurance company."

Not a Hopeless Task.

She—Yes; why shouldn't you, when so many others have been successful?

To Users Of Gasoline and Motor Oils

You've too much at stake in your motor equipment to be "spoofed" by mere claims about this or that thing in a gasoline or motor oil.

High-sounding technical terms don't insure you all the pep, power, mileage, safety and satisfaction you are entitled to in a motor fuel or lubricant.

But the word "Standard" does. And that's why it is the buy-word and the stand-by of the biggest users of gasoline and oils everywhere.

You can't "spoof" the big users. They know the dependability of the Standard Oil products and the responsibility of the Company back of them.

They know that if there were a better gasoline than New Crown or a better motor oil than Polarine, the Standard Oil Company would have it for them.

But "there aint no sich animal," no matter who says there is.

So good, so uniform, so dependable and so economical is New Crown

Gasoline that it is universally called "The Perfect Motor Fuel." It's even better than the requirements specified by the U.S. Government.

New Crown is made right here in Kentucky by a Kentucky firm, the Standard Oil Company (Kentucky) in its own refinery at Louisville, from which you get it fresh at all times---a firm that for 36 years has been a vital part of the business activities of the state of Kentucky and the economical life of its people.

Don't be "Spoofed" Buy the "Always Reliable"

Standard Oil Products---New Crown Gasoline, Polarine Oils and Greases, back of which is a responsibility that is your guarantee of maximum pep, power, safety and satisfaction. And buy them from these, your own home dealers:

THE NEW FAMILY

By JULIA A. ROBINSON

The little village of Dunbar was filled with excitement. A new family was to move into the place, a rare event for that remote country town.

The Coney farm, as it was called. had fong been vacant, and rundown. Now a new owner was coming, and in-terest ran high.

"His name's Jenkins," Mrs. Jones informed her neighbors. She had been making inquiries about the expected newcomers. "They've been living down in the city. He's got a wife but she's slim, and five children."

All were eager to see the new family arrive. Some of the women even went down to the small flag station.

The whistle sounded the train came to a stop, and the new family alighted, mash late in the day, so as to have all of them. A trunk, well strapped,

WHAT SHE FOUND

By NETTIE B. FANNING

1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndica Two days before the midwinter banquet of the Greeneville Literary solety, Mrs. Fleming was finishing the scollete gown which she had planned wear on that occasion. It was before the time of backless bodices and she was afraid she had been almost oo daring in planning that kind of a gown when most of the ladies would vear a "V" neck, and their longleeved "undies" would probably show through their chiffon or crepe de chine

Although not fashionable as to othes, the club was very exclusive. and so old that its charter members had grown white-haired or baid-headed, according to their respective sex teachers of varying ages and a few thers. Mrs. Fleming was one of the thers. There were two bachelors, Mr. Black and Mr. Tilden, the always immaculate principal of the grammar school, thirty-five, pink-cheeked and six feet two. Young Mrs. Fleming sighed as she sewed. She wished she could do some thing to wake up the club. They were oo smug and complacent. They had had the same president for 15 years.

A telephone call interrupted Mrs. Fleming's musings. It was the chairman of the banquet committee, who said that Mrs. Worden would be unable to be at the banquet and would Mrs. Fleming please till in her place on the program.

Mrs. Fleming promised to see what she could do, put on her things and the met Miss Davids, a club member. and stopped to chat with her. As they parted a few torn scraps of paper slipped unnoticed from Miss David's notebook and fell at Mrs. Fleming's feet. She looked down at them, then picked them up, tucked them into her purse and hastily turned toward home. where she spent some time in neatly patching the pieces together, picture uzzle fashion. Two nights later the banquet progressed from fruit cocktails to demitasse. Then the tables were cleared and speeches were in order.

When Mrs. Fleming was called on she arose, looked steadily at Mr. Tildisreputable looking paper, laid it on the table face down and began gravely

"Two days ago I started for the library to search for something to read tonight, little thinking that I would soon be unravelling a buffling mystery oncerning three of our prominent club To say that I have been alternately interested, curious, astonlearned, faintly expressed my emotions. Before reaching the library I stopped to chat a moment with Miss After we parted I noticed some bits of paper on the walk. They must have fallen from her notebook as we were talking. On one of the pieces I saw the words, 'exceedingly shocking."

Miss Davids' face showed blank

Mrs. Fleming continued: "Now, any thing shocking is apt to be interesting. particularly if it concerns those with whom one is well acquainted." Several people stirred uneastly in their seats.

"It chanced that other bits of paper had fallen, with the writing up. After a hasty glance I simply had to know what it all meant, and gathered up the papers. You will begin to understand why I did this when I repeat to you the words I saw in the order in which I first saw them on the ground. 'EX-CEEDINGLY SHOCKING—TILDEN— ROCKING - MISS PENNY - OPEN WORKED STOCKING-MISS ROSS-SAD."

Her audience was now listening breathfessly, and consternation showed in the faces of the two middle-aged school-teachers mentioned. Mrs. Fleming went on:

"There were other scraps with words on them. After gathering them up I at once returned home and spent the afternoon in plecing them together.' She looked soberly at the paper on the table and all eyes followed her gaze. "I thought at first I would say noth ing about it: but as the matter so intimately concerns us all. I felt that rou, too, should be told." Every eye ons fixed upon her as she took the paper from the table.

"Listen," she said. "Could anything e more dreadful than this?"

GIANT TURTLE

Battles Fiercely With Four Men. Attempting to Gather Her Eggs

This is a story of a battle against a big "trunk-back" sea turtle weighing at least 1,200 pounds, in which four West Palm Beach men had one of the most exciting experiences of their lives on the beach a short distance south of the Jupiter inlet. Leaving Palm Beach about mid-night, a night or two ago, a party of turtle egg hunters sailed forth with their electric flashlights and sacks to search the beach below Jupiter. This party was made up of Edward W. Landgraf and Joseph Burgner, two North Olive street barbers, Bob Burgner and Holman D. Couch of W. W. Tibbetts realty offices.

The men reached their destination about one o'clock in the morning and it was as dark as pitch. The old fallacy about giant sea-turtles laying their eggs by the light of the full moon during the months of May and June was shot to pieces on this trip, for the local hunters found fresh evidence of various sea turtles visiting the beach and laying their eggs under cover of darkness.

Far above the average high-water mark visited by the sea-turtles that invade these shores during their nesting season, the hunters found a "trunk--back" turtle laying her eggs. The flash of electric pocket lights did not seem to disturb the big turtle in the least and as fast as she laid her eggs she packed the m and covered them with her great flappers. A trunk-turtle lays her eggs in a trench fully three and one-half or four feet

North and south of the middle nest and will doubtless be the editor of the the big turtle made two "fake" nests. As soon as the big turtle finishes laying her eggs, which consumed fully an hour, she crawled along toward the ocean, the four men started digging down into the sand. They had gone down three and a half feet and were removing the eggs into a sack. when suddenly the turtle returned to drive off the intruders.

> Landgraf was down in the trench to his waist, digging out the eggs with his hands, when Couch gave a warning cry that the big turtle was upon them. They flashed their lights and the illumination disclosed the turtle within a few feet of the nest, crawling as fast as possible and snorting with a sound very much like that of a bull alligator blowing. The three men atop the trench ran with warning cries, but Mr. Landgraf found it difficult to crawl out of the hole and get away. By this time the turtle, with her jaws snapping and neck extended over the trench, made a final effort to grab Landgraf, who got away, however,

The four men closed in about the but the sea-monster simply used her claws or flappers and "dusted" sand with such rapidity that it resembled a barrage. The sand, thrown fully twenty feet, struck the men in their faces with such force as to sting and burn. The Aquarium has a standing offer of $20 to anyone flopping over a trunk-back turtle on its back and notifying the Aquarium, so that the turtle may be brought in for exhibition purposes, alive, but these four men made up their minds that they would not undertake any flopping for $150 a flop. The turtle followed them down the beach along the high tide line and finally went back into the water, only to reappear again close to shore.

The hunters removed 112 large eggs from the nest made by the turtle and twelve small eggs. They found other nests during the next three or four hours, and returned with a total of 459 turtle eggs. The big trunk-back was described as larger than the average dining table, and as high from the ground to the base or top of its shell as five feet .-- Ex-

John felt bitter and discouraged as he banged the door of the pretty flat he had prepared so lovingly a few months ago for his bride. "It's hard enough to get a living and win success, anyhow," he muttered de-

At home Lydia yawned and stretched herself. Even the soiled wrapper and hair in curl papers could not wholey disguise the fact that she was young and pretty. Pushing the breakfast dishes one side, she got out her writing materials" and became absorbed. The "divinely beautiful maiden with coal-black, starry eyes and raven curls, clad in shimmering golden tissue," had just fallen rapturously into the arms of the prince when the bell of the flat rang and Lydia reluctantly went to the door.

Lydia angrily tore up the letter, but e words persisted in her memory. Her pen went more slowly and her thoughts turned from her heroine's starry eyes to the sad, disappointed brown ones of her own John. She tried again to write, but the story became hopelessly mixed in her thoughts with her own life.

I realize that, as I am in her company, though she is far from paying any attention to my worthy self; which," added John ruefully, "grows disappointing."

"You see," Ted explained, "Charile has five brothers who are her admiring pals. It was they, who dubbed her Charlie. So she was grown into a way of treating men in a natural manner as good companions.

It was in the wide hallway that John one evening later, learned the truth, or a part of the truth. By desperate force, he detained Charlie Winters as she was flying past him up the stair. Her small hands were claimed masterfully, and the following tumultuous and amazing conversation ensued. "You shall not run from me always," cried John, tremblingly earnest, "What have I done? Why do you dislike me? I love you, you"; he added astonishing.

Charlie, snatching away her hands, paused to look back at him tauntingly. Why, there is nothing interesting about me," she innocently repeated. "Nor charming either. I am merely friendly, even when I do," Miss Charlie gave a charming demonstra-tion, "make eyes at you." Sarcastic Summing Up.

A client of Sydney Bartlett's wantted Mr. and Mrs. Homer Hyland ed William M. Evarts retained as associate, Bartiett assented, but some what ungraciously. The client, after the argument of the case, asked visited Mr. and Mrs. John Yarber Bartlett how Evarts spoke. "Oh, very pleasantly," said Bartlett, "There was a vein of ratiocination running through all that verbage-attenuated at times, it is true, but never wholly

over a rough-finished, sun-baked concrete and brick pavement at record-breaking speed—that is the gruelling test Oldfield Cord Tires underwent successfully at Indian-apolis Speedway May 30th. They were on the winner's car for the third successive year and on eight of the ten finishing in the money, upholding the confidence successful race drivers have in the trustworthiness and ability of these tires to meet the greatest demands of speed, endurance and safety. Their records in every other important race have been equally as good.

Consider this achievement along with another test of Oldfield quality made at Wichita, Kansas, this past winter and early 34,525 miles on rutted, icy Kansas roads, running day and night on a Studebaker stock car without a single tire change. This test was made by a group of Wichita auto-motive dealers in a tire, oil and gasoline economy run. Mayor Kemp of Wichita was official observer and made affidavit to the mileage and service given by Oldfield tires.

You may never subject your tires to the gruelling experience of Indianapolis nor the steady grind of bad winter roads, but it is good to know you can get such safety and mileage economy by buying Oldfield tires. Ask your nearest dealer.
